

Jason Pappani is the Surface Water Bureau Chief with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ), overseeing the agency's implementation of components the Clean Water Act, including the Water Quality Standards, Monitoring and Assessment, TMDL, and Non-Point Source Management programs. Jason started work with the Department of Environmental Quality in 2007 as the Monitoring and Assessment Coordinator where he led field crews monitoring streams, rivers, and lakes throughout the state. Jason moved into water quality standards in 2015, and has previously worked as both a Water Quality Standards Scientist and the Water Quality Standards Lead.